

Reported Speech with Vogue Interviews

1. Read a part of an interview with a fictitious book writer, Joe Harrplayer.
Next, fill in the table below the text.

David: Tell us what made you begin your writing career.

Joe: I was in my last year at the university when I realized I didn't really know what I wanted to do with my life. At that time, my best friend told me that he liked reading my blog and I should try writing something longer. So I did, and that's how my first book came into existence.

D: We should thank your best friend, then. Personally, I believe that you are a master at storytelling! Where do you get inspiration from?

J: That's funny! My wife asked me where I got all the ideas from the day before. To be honest, I don't know how it works. It just happens - sometimes out of nowhere.

D: What's your next move and when can we expect your next book?

J: Well, I'm planning to start a new book tomorrow! Just kidding. I say that all the time, but my busy schedule makes it impossible. I can tell you that I came up with a great story last summer. So I know what I want to write and I promise that I will start writing this year.

D: Thanks for talking and good luck with your new project.

J: Thanks for having me. You don't realize it but you've just made my father's dream come true. He said once that he'd always dreamt of seeing me in this show!

2. Study the text and table from ex. 1 and choose the correct option to form grammar rules for using reported speech.

- When we use reported speech, we usually move one tense forward/back.
- If something that a person says is still true we keep the same tense/change the tense to a future form.
- When we report questions, we should have the same/different word order than in questions.
- In reported speech, we can use say or tell, however, tell goes with/without object noun or pronouns (John, me, us, them, etc.).
- When using reported speech, we also have to change time markers and pronouns/names and places.

3. Rewrite the sentences using reported speech.

a) We met in 2015 here in New York.

They said that they had met in 2015 there in New York.

b) I'm going to visit my parents this Sunday.

She said she was going to visit her parents that Sunday.

c) I will become a millionaire.

He told me that he would become a millionaire.

d) What are you doing tomorrow?

She asked me what I was doing the next day.

e) I must send these letters to our clients.

He said that he had to send those letters to their clients.
